Police investigating sudden deaths at Roslindale complex

Two men found dead Police looking into how they died Hazardous material crew called in Woman also found with life-threatening illness

Police are trying to determine what caused the death of two men and the life-threatening illness of a woman who were found inside a Roslindale apartment building.

Officers were first called to Roslyn Apartments at 1 Cliffmont St., just before 11 a.m. Wednesday for a man in cardiac arrest. The man, in his 60s, was pronounced dead on-scene and had no visible injuries.

Police were called back to the building at 5:30 a.m. Thursday and found another man who died. Officers found him lying in the first-floor hallway, police said. He was also pronounced dead at the scene.

About four hours later, police responded again to the building for a woman suffering from unknown life-threatening injuries. She was taken to Brigham and Women's Hospital. Identities were not released.

Deathly hazard

A fire department spokesman said that police called a hazardous materials technician to the building Thursday. An investigator in a full-body hazmat suit could be seen entering and leaving the building Thursday afternoon. Authorities released few details about the incidents, other than that detectives are investigating "sudden deaths." Police told WCVB that they are investigating whether the three consumed something that led to their deaths.

Winthrop man faces child-porn possession charges

WINTHROP. A Winthrop man pleaded not guilty Thursday to allegedly having images of child pornography on his computer and sharing those images online.

William Krott III, 30, was arraigned on charges of possession and distribution of child pornography, according to the Suffolk district attorney's office.

The investigation started late last year when a person in an Internet chat session shared an image of child pornography. The chat host's monitoring system took a screenshot of the session and sent it to the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. The center sent the tip to the Suffolk district attorney's office.

Authorities said they obtained a subpoena to access the user's IP computer address, which led them to Krott's home.

"On Krott's personal computer, they recovered multiple images of children in sexualized contexts," the Suffolk district attorney's office said in a statement. Authorities said they found at least five images of child pornography.

Krott was ordered held on $3,000 bail. METRO

Hop-ping into spring: Boston beer club crafts new 'Springfest'

▶ @drinkcraftbeer tweeted Thursday that tickets to "Springfest" are selling faster than ever.

A local beer club is gearing up for its third seasonal beer festival, which promises more than 75 New England beers that put a spotlight on hops.

On Thursday, Drink Craft Beer announced "Springfest: A Celebration of Hops," is set to run April 5 to April 6 at Space 57 at the Revere Boston Hotel.

Drink Craft Beer's "Fall to Winter Fest" attracted 1,500 people to the venue in December, and the summer's sold out "Summerfest: A Celebration of Farmhouse Ale" in Somerville drew 1,200 attendees.

"Our events focus on more than just beer, but providing a great experience for craft beer lovers and the craft beer curious alike," said Jeff Wharton, co-founder of Drink Craft Beer. "They're meant to be fun while helping attendees learn about beer and the great local brewers in our area."

Ten percent of profits go toward the brewers, he said.

The spring festival will celebrate the most popular ingredient in craft beer — hops — by bringing together 25 New England craft brewers and cider makers, each bringing at least one beer that features the flavorful little flower.

▶ Pistorius taken into custody

Pistorius charged with murder

JOHANNESBURG. South African "Blade Runner" Oscar Pistorius, a double amputee who became one of the biggest names in world athletics, was charged on Thursday with shooting dead his girlfriend at his upscale home in Pretoria.

Police said they opened a murder case after a 30-year-old woman was found dead at the Paralympic and Olympic star's house in the Silverlakes gated complex on the capital's outskirts.

Pistorius, 26, and his girlfriend, model Reeva Steenkamp, had been the only people in the house at the time of the shooting, police brigadier Denise Beukes told reporters.

Police said a 9mm pistol had been found at the scene. REUTERS

Crippled Gulf cruise nears end

MOBILE, ALA. More than 4,200 people trapped aboard the crippled cruise ship Carnival Triumph, having endured days of overflowing toilets, were due to return to land when tugboats haul the vessel into Mobile, Ala., late Thursday.

The 893-foot vessel, notorious for reports of raw sewage from overflowing toilets, has been without propulsion and running on emergency generator power since Sunday, when an engine-room fire left it adrift in the Gulf of Mexico.

Operated by Carnival Cruise Lines, the flagship brand of global cruise-ship giant Carnival Corp., the ship left Galveston, Texas, a week ago carrying 3,143 passengers and 1,086 crew. It was supposed to return there on Monday. REUTERS

ADRIFT ON THE SHIP OF STATE

Opinion

TOM FOREMAN

POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN

letters@metro.us

CNN=POLITICS

Many people love taking cruises. They prattle on endlessly about limbo contests and their favorite Hawaiian shirts (never mind that they are going to Cancun) and the endless shrimp bars. I, however, am not one of them. My skin crawls at the mere idea of being trapped on a ship with a few thousand strangers and a karaoke machine. "Hello, Dante? I have another circle for you."

The events of the past week have cemented my feelings. But I must say if the alternative is enduring another year of hearing how much Washington cares about the middle class, I may book a cabin and take my chances.

President Barack Obama swept up much of the "middle class" vote in the last election, and as he plowed through his State of the Union address this week, it was clear that he is not through with the subject. Time and again he has pledged his undying support to "the true engine" of the American economy, a "thriving, growing, rising middle class." The only problem is, those folks have not thrived, grown or risen much under his leadership, no matter how much they may like and trust him.

When Obama took office, about 133 million Americans were working. Today, about 1.2 million more people are employed. That is better than losing ground, but it is hardly the robust growth the middle class needs. On top of that, there is the persistent and equally damaging problem of underemployment. A recent study at Rutgers University found that more than half of the people who lost jobs and then found new employment had to take pay cuts in the process.

Quoted

I'm not putting all this at the president's door.

I'm not putting all this at the president's door. Certainly the big downturn started under George W. Bush. What I am saying is that, for all the noise from Democrats and Republicans alike about how much they love the middle class, neither side seems to have any real ideas about how to help.

It's as if the middle class is adrift on a disabled ship and the parties are really doing is watching from a distant shore.

‘Lonerism’ for the masses

Tame Impala sing about sensations where it ‘Feels Like We Only Go Backwards’

But this psychedelic Aussie band seem to be going forward

▶ Tame Impala play “Late Night” with Jimmy Fallon on Monday and play the House of Blues next month. At press time, tickets were still on sale.

MATT SAVILLE

On paper, a psychedelic band from Western Australia who call their latest album “Lonerism” don’t seem like the most likely candidates to be the biggest sensation in indie rock. But Tame Impala are selling out most of the shows on the tour they are about to begin, which is their biggest trek through the U.S. to date.

“Whenever there’s music where the lyrics are wearing your heart on your sleeve and talking about things that you don’t really talk to anybody about — which is really just kind of music in general — but whenever you’re doing it on-stage, you just have that feeling that you’re connecting with other people in the world that feel the same way,” says singer and guitarist Kevin Parker.

The music on “Lonerism” ranges from heavy to melodic to focused to spacey. Sometimes it’s all of those things in one song. What makes the album so exciting is that no structure is safe from being seriously messed with. The songs are all prone to either sudden unexpected explorations or abrupt endings. A vicious lead guitar might step forward into what seems like it would be a solo, only to have the song end two seconds later. On the song “Keep On Lying,” a trippy organ and guitar interlude gives way to a party conversation that makes the listener feel like an observer who wants — but just isn’t able — to participate.

“I love the sound of something that makes you feel like you’re on drugs,” admits Parker when asked if he approves of the “stoner rock” title that his band is often tagged with.

But the song titles on “Lonerism” speak volumes for those who don’t speak much: “Music to Walk Home By,” “Why Won’t They Talk To Me?” and “Feels Like We Only Go Backwards” are just a few.

“It’s really an album about other people, or at least trying to interact with people,” says Parker. “I think the whole loner thing about the album is that, overall, the character realizes that he’s destined to be alone, from all of these interactions.”

Pat Healy
pat.healy@metro.us

PS 22, I love you

Parker says he has been surprised by how people have taken to the songs on “Lonerism,” in particular a group of school children from Staten Island whose moving reinterpretation of “Feels Like We Only Go Backwards” has racked up thousands of views online.

YOUTUBE

▶ “It was pretty surreal,” says Parker of watching the PS 22 Chorus perform one of his songs. “It felt like the people doing the song, that whole thing that I was watching on the computer screen was bigger than the song, like I was covering their song. ... Kids can extract that pop element from it. It’s not that only kids can do it, but it’s that it can be taken out of it and you can leave behind the totally blown-out distorted drums and you can just make a nice little sing-along out of it that’s really uplifting.”

A closer look

Broken Mirrors

Tame Impala’s summer single, “Elephant,” features one of the most badass lines in recent rock memory. In the song, about an overconfident, but ultimately insecure man, Parker sings, “He broke the mirrors off his Cadillac, cuz he doesn’t like it looking like he looks back.”

Of that line, Parker does allow that it was on special reserve for a while.

“I don’t actually remember how I thought of it,” he says. “All I know is that I was driving home from the beach. I know where I was and it was long before I started writing lyrics for that song. I didn’t have a notebook, but I just remembered that rhyme. I didn’t even think it was going to fit. I had no idea how it was going to fit into a song. I then sort of sang it and put it into a sentence and it really seemed to fit well. It was one of those cosmic miracles with lyrics that don’t happen very often for me.”

YIPPEE-KI-YAY, WILLIS IS BACK

▶ Bruce Willis, Jai Courtney and Sebastian Koch sport a few guns in "A Good Day to Die Hard," in theaters now.

The star admits that the titles of the 'Die Hard' franchise are getting ridiculous ◐ 'I like seeing myself not be able to figure things out,' he says ◐ He reflects on a 25-year career playing the wisecracking John McClane

Bruce Willis is the first to admit that, five movies in, the titles of the "Die Hard" franchise are getting ridiculous. "We only do another 'Die Hard' when they have another really complicated title that no one quite understands," Willis jokes. "We had just gotten to where we understand [2007's] 'Live Free or Die Hard,' and then now we have 'A Good Day to Die Hard,' which, I have to be honest with you, I'm a little baffled still by that one."

Twenty-five years after the first "Die Hard" turned Willis from a funny TV guy into a bona fide action star, he's back as John McClane, the wisecracking New York cop who always manages to be in the wrong place at the wrong time. This time, that wrong place is Moscow, where he's tracking down his estranged son (Jai Courtney). "Moscow was really built for a couple of fish out of water like us. I can't imagine a bigger ocean of noncommunication than Eastern Europe and Russia," Willis says. "I don't speak any other languages really. We got a couple jokes out of that. ... I like seeing myself not be able to figure things out — not being able to figure out how the car works, not being able to figure out what someone is saying to me."

The fourth film found McClane reconciling with his daughter (Mary Elizabeth Winstead), who has a small part here. With John Jr. featuring in this film, does that mean a sixth might reunite McClane and his wife, Holly, played by Bonnie Bedelia? "I always think of Bonnie Bedelia and having her coming back," Willis says. "Those things are unfortunately out of my hands." Bedelia, for her part, has been keeping busy on NBC's "Parenthood."

Willis is the fourth member of the "Expendables" team to hit theaters with a headlining film in 2013, following Arnold Schwarzenegger, Sylvester Stallone and Jason Statham. But Willis isn't concerned with how his latest stacks up against his colleagues'. "I wish everyone well," he says. "I'm still a big film fan. I still go to see other action films and ... comedies and all kinds of weird things. There is no competition."

The genesis of 'Yippee-ki-yay'

It turns out possibly the most famous line of dialogue in Bruce Willis' career, "Yippee-ki-yay, motherf—er," wasn't even in the original "Die Hard" script. "It was an ad-lib," Bruce Willis says. "Alan Rickman was such a good bad guy, he was constantly picking on me. He said something to me and I just happened to let that line slip out and it became part of the fabric of the film. It's amazing to me that the line has lasted this long. Kids say it to me on the street. Grandmothers. It's a little awkward. But I'm happy that they say it."

'Happy People: A Year in the Taiga'

The latest from Werner Herzog is, like "Grizzly Man," not a Herzog original, but rather his own Herzogian imprint on already-existing material. In this case it's a gutting of Dmitry Vasyukov's four-hour TV doc on Siberia's perversely upbeat populace, cut down to a brisk 90 minutes and fitted with Herzog's contemplative (and sometimes amusingly loopy) commentary.

'56 Up'

One of the greatest film concepts — a documentary series that catches up with the same people every seven years, inaugurated when they were 7 years old — reaches the age of 56. Structurally, each film is exactly the same: Director Michael Apted (who moonlights on fiction films as diverse as "Nell" and "The World is Not Enough") catches up with each person, provided they're willing to participate. But it's a formula that needs no alteration, and the series gets more cosmic the longer it endures.

Iron(s) Man

The famed thespian talks about his success, never chasing a paycheck, restoring medieval castles and his euphonious voice

With more than 30 years of work in film behind him, Jeremy Irons has an impressive average for what work he's proud of. "I think I'm very happy that I've been a part of about 80 percent of what I've done," Irons says. "The other 20 percent I would not mention, certainly, because I would like them to disappear off the face of the universe. But at the time I must have done them for a reason." His latest, "Beautiful Creatures," finds Irons as the patriarch of a supernatural Southern family, based on the best-selling young adult books series. But the role he mentioned that we're really looking forward to is recording GPS directions.

JOHN BRAMLEY

▶ Jeremy Irons stars in "Beautiful Creatures," in theaters now.

An 80 percent success rate is a pretty fantastic average for an actor.

I've been lucky, yes. I think it's because I never chase the paychecks. I've always done the work that I was attracted to. I did a big project restoring an old medieval castle that was very expensive, and there were a couple of things during the middle of that where I just went off and earned some cash doing movies that I probably wouldn't have done normally.

For castle upkeep?

For castle-building, yeah. It had been derelict since 1603, so there was a lot of work needed. But normally I do work that I rate highly, you know? I get paid more or less depending on what the budget is on the movie. So I suppose that's why the average is 80 percent. It's harder for kids now, I think. When I started out in theater, I was earning 12 pounds, 10 shillings a week. I never became an actor to become rich or famous.

You have a very distinct voice. Do people often ask you to record their voicemail messages?

Sometimes, yeah. It depends how well I know them, sometimes I'll do it. What I haven't done is sat-nav for a car. That would probably be quite interesting. I'm not sure I'd have the patience. I'd like to give it a bit of personality, though.

The authors of "Beautiful Creatures" say they modeled your character, Macon Ravenwood, on you. Has that happened to you before?

Not that I know of, no. I mean, I get scripts sent to me where people say, ""written this with you in mind," but I never do them. People write scripts on what they've seen you play, and of course I always like playing things that are a bit unlike what I've played before.

Jeremy Irons: 'Die Hard' foe

Jeremy Irons' turn as Simon Gruber, the vengeful brother of Hans Gruber (Alan Rickman) in "Die Hard with a Vengeance," is one of the franchise's best villains. With the fifth "Die Hard" film out this week, we thought we'd ask Irons what he thinks makes a good bad guy for John McClane (Bruce Willis).

"It's difficult because I know when John McTiernan filmed it, he said, 'Simon Gruber is actually a much more interesting character than John McClane.' And of course that was a problem. So a lot of my stuff was cut," Irons says. "I can't remember [what was cut] now, but I remember at the time thinking, 'Oh, about a third of this is gone.'

"You have a franchise that hangs on someone like Bruce, who is wonderful. Nevertheless, the character is always doing the same sort of thing. The villain is going to be more interesting — and yet can't be because John McClane needs to be the hero. So that's a problem."

Playing it 'Safe'

'Safe Haven'
Genre: Romantic thriller
Director: Lasse Hallstrom
Stars: Josh Duhamel and Julianne Hough
Rating: PG-13
Grade: ●●○○○

Josh Duhamel and Julianne Hough are likeable enough, but this eighth adaptation of a Nicholas Sparks-authored heart flutterer won't find a safe haven from discerning audiences. Simply put, it's the tale of a woman who seeks sanctuary in a sleepy town and falls for the local widower while her psychotic hubby hunts her down. Veteran filmmaker Lasse Hallstrom ("Dear John") does his best to mold the melodrama but "Safe Haven" is still mostly stale and unmistakably safe storytelling.

▶ Julianne Hough and Josh Duhamel do some heavy staring in "Safe Haven," now in theaters.

'Safe Haven' required risks from its stars

Bringing a Nicholas Sparks book to life is a challenge Julianne Hough and Josh Duhamel felt the pressure of 'The Notebook' weighing on them

Former "Dancing with the Stars" champ Julianne Hough doesn't have a lot of big-screen experience that doesn't rely on her dance background, so after "Burlesque," "Footloose" and "Rock of Ages," she was ready for a challenge.

"Yeah, I left the dancing and the singing outside," she says of her new film, "Safe Haven," a romantic thriller based on the novel by Nicholas Sparks. "For me it [meant] going to an acting coach and getting more training. It was definitely a lot more heartfelt and personal."

Her role — a woman on the run from an abusive past who finds solace with a widower (Josh Duhamel) in a small North Carolina town — also required her to take on some pretty heavy issues related to domestic violence. "It's a big responsibility to do it right," Hough says. "If somebody has gone through that, it feels real and honest for them. I talked to women at shelters, I know friends of family, my own experiences — but at the same time it was such a safe environment to do it in."

She did get to draw on her dancing background for some scenes. "We had a stunt woman — but these guys will tell you, there's no way I was gonna let them do that," she says of some of the flashbacks of her character's abuse. "This is fun to me. It's like dancing. It's choreography. I did get hurt a little bit, but I didn't tell anybody."

For her co-star, filming "Safe Haven" introduced a new luxury: two weeks of prep time on location before shooting started. "I was like, 'Really, what am I gonna do for two weeks?'" Duhamel says. "But it was great because I really got to soak in the local environment and think about what I wanted to do in this movie. By the time we started shooting I felt like I was this dude. I wish that I always had the luxury of getting there that early and becoming part of the local environment."

Of course, being a small-town boy at heart, feeling like part of that environment wasn't too difficult. "I grew up in a state full of little towns like that," the North Dakota native says. "It's sort of in my blood. I love New York, but that's too much for me. That town just swallowed me up. I'd probably prefer a smaller town … like Los Angeles. It's a whole bunch of little villages next to each other."

The Sparks pressure

"Safe Haven" marks the eighth Nicholas Sparks romance novel to be made into a film, from 2002's "A Walk to Remember" to last year's "The Lucky One." But it's his hugely successful second film adaptation, "The Notebook," that moviegoers remember most. And that can put a lot of pressure on the romantic leads of a new one, something Julianne Hough and Josh Duhamel are all too aware of.

"There is a lot of pressure to live up to the success of these previous movies, but we try not to think about that," Duhamel says. "If I tried to do what Ryan Gosling did in 'The Notebook' I'd be pulling my hair out. If we try and replicate that in any way, it's a trap." And Hough agrees completely. "I am the demographic of Nicholas Sparks books," she says. "I loved 'The Notebook,' but this was our version of what this story is."

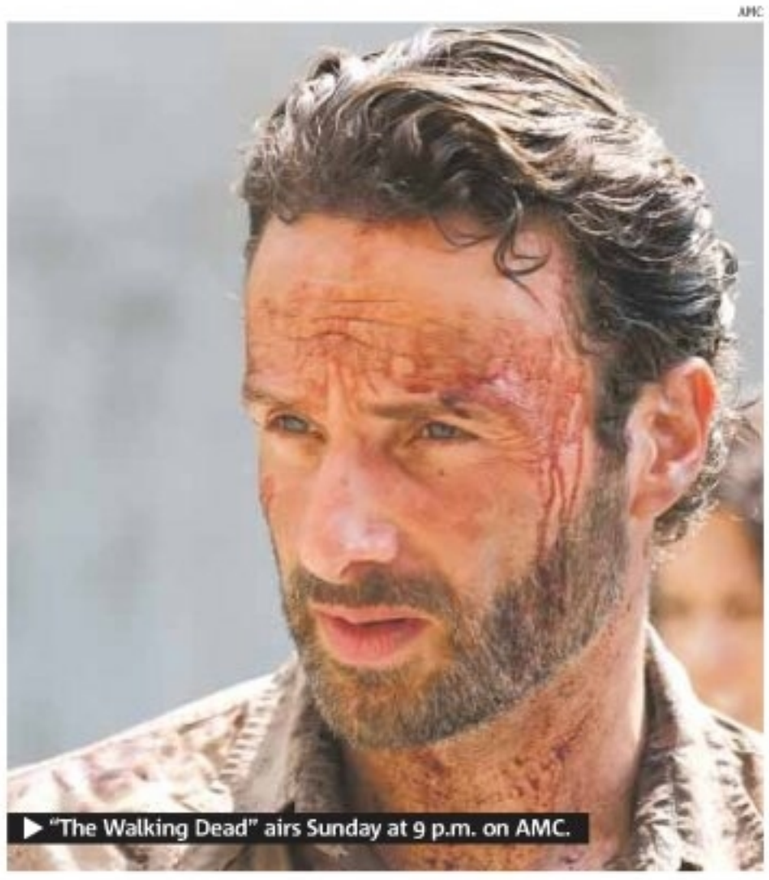
HOUGH, ON PORTRAYING A VICTIM OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE IN "SAFE HAVEN"



▶ "The Walking Dead" airs Sunday at 9 p.m. on AMC.

Andrew Lincoln is 'Walking' us through

▶ The star on playing his poignant 'Walking Dead' character ▶ How would he react to a zombie apocalypse? ▶ He recalls 'Love, Actually'

British actor Andrew Lincoln was once only known to American audiences as that sensitive guy in "Love Actually" who made women everywhere teary-eyed when he told Keira Knightley he loved her — using flash cards. No longer. Lincoln's ignited his career as Sheriff Rick Grimes in the huge AMC hit, "The Walking Dead." All it took was trading in sweet love notes for some choice zombie-slaying weapons.

"The Walking Dead" is a horror show — but also a psychological drama showing how people deal with danger.
It's not just a show about monsters. All of the horror movies I love, such as "The Shining," have some sort of moral. The characters never cease evolving, and that's what makes the show so strong. The psychological impact of the decisions my character needs to take is the most interesting part.

Have you ever been scared on the set?
No. But you know, zombies are pretty cool people. There is this one scene when I come back to the farm followed by a horde of zombies in the middle of the night. That was scary. Other than that, no. I am a zombie killer after all.

Rick Grimes is very different from Mark, your character in "Love Actually." Do you have a favorite?
It's hard for me to choose between two people who are both so far removed from my personality. "Love Actually" is a beautiful film. But I like the fact that with Rick Grimes you never know what to expect.

Q&A

How would you react to a real-life zombie invasion?

I would be the first one to run away.

How would you describe him?
I wouldn't be able to. One of the most remarkable things about him is his changeability. If he's still alive, it's because he sticks by all of his decisions and these become increasingly difficult and morally ambiguous. But at no point do we lose touch with who he really is.

The third season of "The Walking Dead" just started. Can you give us some spoilers?
One of the show's biggest strengths is how main characters come and go to be replaced by new ones. This formula has helped us add a new dimension and is what enables the show to reinvent itself every season. I wouldn't be able to tell you what a classic episode of "TWD" is like because I've never done one. I'm just happy Rick has survived all these episodes.

Did you ever think the show would be so successful when you first signed on ?
You can't predict this sort of thing. All I can say is that on paper, a TV show about zombies shouldn't have made such an impact on my career.

It influenced your career?
Definitely. I never thought I'd ever get to play such an emblematic American character. It's a great privilege.

Is Alexa Ray Joel slowly morphing into Minka Kelly?

Joel in 2011

PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES

Joel last Saturday at Fashion Week

Pictures popped up recently of Alexa Ray Joel, the 27-year-old spawn from the famous union between "Uptown Girl" Christie Brinkley and Billy Joel, looking a little, well, suspicious. But don't listen to what your head is telling you (and I know your head is screaming "plastic surgery!"). No, listen to what Brinkley has to say about her daughter's changing looks.

The former supermodel went on "Anderson Live" on Thursday to defend her daughter saying her transformed appearance isn't from a doctor, but rather she's "blossomed so stunningly."

"She's stepping out into the world, she's doing things and now [her critics] can't even accept it — it's like, 'Oh she's too beautiful, she bought it all, it's all plastic surgery,'" she said. Brinkley says the only surgery Joel has ever "bought" is "a little tweak of her nose."

This whole thing is totally Freud-worthy (it must be rough to have Christie Brinkley as your mother, no matter how cute you are), but since this is a gossip column and not a graduate-lovel course on psychotherapy, let's just say that if I were Minka Kelly, I'd be slightly disturbed.

Perry breaks off friendship from Rihanna

Rihanna has received her share of criticism for reuniting with Chris Brown, who was arrested for assaulting her in 2009. And it turns out the rekindled romance is even costing her some friendships. Rihanna and Katy Perry "aren't tight anymore because Katy doesn't approve of Rihanna dating Chris Brown," a source tell Us Weekly. Perry and beau John Mayer reportedly steered clear of Rihanna and Brown at the Grammys last weekend.

More likely: Mayer probably boinked Rihanna at some point as well.

Talking points

Gaga cancels world tour

It looks like those four postponed shows Lady Gaga announced earlier this week won't offer enough time for her to recover from her hip injury. Instead, the singer has canceled the rest of her Born This Way Ball tour, with refunds available for tickets to the scuttled performances, Live Nation has announced. "After additional tests this morning to review the severity of the issue, it has been determined that Lady Gaga has a labral tear of the right hip," a statement reads. "She will need surgery to repair the problem, followed by strict downtime to recover. This, unfortunately, will force her to cancel the tour so she can heal."

Sheen is still Lohan's pocketbook

Charlie Sheen is still looking out for Lindsay Lohan financially, apparently. The "Anger Management" star offered to cover half the costs of a fancy gown Lohan wore to a charity event last week, stylist Phillip Bloch tells E! News. "Never in a business like this do you see a celebrity pay for another celebrity," Bloch says. Sheen also gifted Lohan with $100,000 last year to help pay her bill to the IRS.

Hannigan gets restraining order against stalker

"How I Met Your Mother" star Alyson Hannigan has been granted a temporary restraining order against John Hobbs, a New Hampshire man who has repeatedly threatened the lives of Hannigan, her husband, Alexis Denisof, and their children, according to E! News. Hobbs, who was recently discharged from a mental hospital, must stay at least 100 yards away from Hannigan and her family and must refrain from posting about them online. "I still can marry you tomorrow. I can kill you tomorrow too," one Facebook posting by Hobbs last month reads. "It doesn't end. Even after death."

Wood freaks out over pap photo

Evan Rachel Wood went on a Twitter tirade after discovering that the Daily Mail had published a photo of her ultrasound. "Which sick f— paparazzi hid in the parking lot of my hospital after my ultrasound? I can't stand this," she tweeted. "I couldn't be more furious right now. I want to cry. My child isn't even born yet." Wood is expecting her first child with husband Jamie Bell.

WEDNESDAY, FEB. 13

10:20 a.m.
The Michael Kors show is ridiculously packed, with a gang of latecomers standing at the entrance by the photographers' pit since it's too late to get to their seats. One of the security guards is drunk with power and obnoxiously yelling at the group, which includes girl-of-the-moment Miroslava Duma. I scan the rest of the room. Finally! A starry front row. Zoe Saldana, Hilary Swank, Michael Douglas, Jada Pinkett Smith and Willow Smith are here. KENYA HUNT

10:30 a.m.
Trains have been all over the runway this week, and they look like the sexy big sister to the skirts-over-trousers trend that made the rounds last year. Michael Kors uses the idea to cleverly reinvent the little black dress, each coming down the runway with dramatic clementine and royal-blue skirts attached that dip low and sweep the floor in the back. It's a dressy moment in an overall surprisingly sporty show. But Michael Kors is at his best when he's designing glamorous things. As a result, the more athletic pieces (tailored, yellow track pants and a shimmery, slouchy sweater, for example) read a little awkward, like the ritzy lady who wears a tad too much makeup to the gym. KH

Rachel Zoe

Michael Kors

12:10 p.m.
Whoa, Miley Cyrus is front row at Rachel Zoe. She's not someone I associate with Zoe's coterie of glamorous and well-dressed Hollywood clients, but maybe that's about to change? TINA CHADHA

12:20 p.m.
Showtime. Rachel Zoe's '70s girl wears skinny jodhpurs, rock 'n' roll leather leggings and wool coats festooned with fur collars. Flared-leg pants are her bread and butter, and that's not changing. This time she showed them as part of a three-piece suit with fitted jackets that look more polished than her usual boho fare. I'm surprised by how many pieces I want, including the chic, pleated leather trousers, cropped trench coats and sophisticated tuxedo-inspired eveningwear. TC

5 p.m.
At Marchesa: Oh no! I'm seated right behind the celebrity row, which includes Jada Pinkett Smith, Olivia Palermo, Miley Cyrus (she's really making the rounds today) and Lake Bell. That means I'm going to, against my will, photobomb all the images the photographers are currently taking of them. I hide behind my phone. Harvey Weinstein is also walking around greeting folks and thanking them for coming, like a supportive husband. Everyone looks for his attention as he walks by. TC

Marchesa

5:25 p.m.
According to show notes, Francisco de Goya's commanding "Portrait of Maria Teresa de Vallabriga on Horseback" provided the inspiration for red-carpet favorites Georgina Chapman and Keren Craig's collection of grand, statement-making gowns. The dramatic lineup features voluminous couture shapes in duchess satin, regal thread-work embroidery, gilded gold foil and exaggerated peplums. A lot of these looks feel more appropriate for a ball in the 17th century than any event that isn't, say, the Oscars. But the transparent gauze shirts worn over corset cocktail dresses and romantic tulle gowns add some soft, wearable options to the mix. TC

Roasted garlic and smoky greens

Despite its utter simplicity, this soup is deliciously savory with earthy roasted garlic, smoky paprika, creamy potato and silky, bitter kale. Should you crave some protein, dress your bowl of soup with a poached egg.

Ingredients

- 3 large garlic heads
- 3 tablespoons olive oil, plus more for serving
- 2 medium leeks, cleaned and thinly sliced crosswise (white and pale green parts only)
- 2 bay leaves
- 1 tablespoon finely chopped fresh rosemary leaves
- Kosher salt
- Freshly ground black pepper
- 1 medium russet potato, peeled and medium dice
- ½ teaspoon smoked paprika, plus more as needed
- 4 cups low-sodium vegetable broth
- 12 ounces kale, tough stems removed and leaves cut into ½-inch slices (about 4 cups)
- 1 cup water
- 4 poached eggs (optional)

Instructions

1 Heat the oven to 375°F and arrange a rack in the middle.

2 Peel any loose outer skins from the garlic heads and cut off the top quarter of each head to expose the cloves. Place the garlic heads, cut side up, on a large piece of foil, drizzle 1 tablespoon of the oil over all three heads and wrap tightly to form a foil packet. Place the packet on a baking sheet and bake until the garlic cloves are golden brown and very tender, about 60 to 75 minutes. Remove from the oven, open the packet, and let the garlic sit until cool enough to handle. Squeeze the roasted cloves from their skins and place in a small bowl; set aside.

3 Heat the remaining 2 tablespoons oil in a large saucepan over medium heat until shimmering. Add the leeks, bay leaves and rosemary, season with salt and pepper. Cook, stirring frequently, until the leeks have begun to soften and the herbs are fragrant, about four minutes. Add the potato, roasted garlic and paprika, season with salt and pepper and stir to combine. Cook, stirring occasionally, until a bit of crust begins to form on the bottom of the pan — about 10 minutes. Add the broth and loosen the crusty bits from the bottom of the pan with a wooden spoon. Reduce the heat to low, cover with a tight-fitting lid, and let simmer until the potatoes are knife-tender, about 15 minutes. Discard the bay leaves and remove the pan from the heat.

4 Using a blender, puree the soup in batches until smooth, removing the small cap from the blender lid (the pour lid) and covering the space with a kitchen towel (this allows steam to escape and prevents the lid from popping off). Place the blended soup in a clean saucepan. (Alternatively, you can use an immersion blender to puree the soup in the original saucepan.)

5 Return the soup to a simmer over low heat. Add the kale and water and stir to combine. Cover and cook, stirring occasionally, until the kale is tender but still brightly colored, about 10 to 12 minutes. Taste and add more paprika, salt and pepper as needed.

6 Ladle the soup into bowls, drizzle with olive oil, season with pepper and top with a poached egg if desired.

Through March 10
Cambridge Family YMCA Theatre
820 Mass. Ave., Cambridge
$28-50, 866-811-4111
www.actorsshakespeareproject.org
The Actors' Shakespeare Company presents a rare non-Shakespeare work with this play by Will Eno, which explores the consciousness of everyday suburban America through a town whose pleasantness ironically serves to highlight the existential emptiness of its residents. Despite their best efforts at anonymity, they find their lives inevitably — and strangely — intertwined. Ain't that always the way?

Boston Opera House
539 Washington St., Boston
$40-$65, 617-876-4275
www.worldmusic.org
This enormous band's eclectic, chameleon-like sound draws from Latin music, jazz, cabaret, exotica, film scores — anything, really, that would provide the right ambiance for sipping one of its namesakes. Take your latest mistress to an imaginary lounge, equal parts swank and kitsch, located somewhere between the fantasy worlds of "Mad Men" and "Sex and the City" and you'll get the picture.

MOVIES

2012 Oscar-Nominated Short Films
Sunday through March 17
Institute of Contemporary Art
100 Northern Ave., Boston
$10, 617-478-3103
www.icaboston.org
This series of screenings includes three separate collections of the best of 2012's short film crop, in the categories of animation, live action and documentary. Recurring themes include third world poverty and old age. Among the animated shorts is a "Simpsons" piece in which Maggie Simpson is sent to a day care that indoctrinates impressionable tots into the philosophy of Ayn Rand.

Friday through March 10
Sanctuary Theatre
400 Harvard St., Cambridge
$40, 617-354-7467
www.ballettheatre.org
Jose Mateo presents a Valentine's-themed show, exploring the changing meaning of love throughout the ages, from the formal courtship of the Renaissance to the freewheeling style of the modern age. As usual, all the works are Mateo originals — 2003's "Reverie" is set to Ravel, 2007's "Lovers, Fools, Saints, and Sinners" to Italian Early Music and 2010's "Timeless Attractions" to Ginastera.

Carpenter Center for the Visual Arts
24 Quincy St., Cambridge
Free, 617-495-3251
www.ves.fas.harvard.edu
This highly conceptual multi media, multiartist exhibition is difficult to explain succinctly, but it's meant to celebrate the 50th anniversary of Le Corbusier's Carpenter Center building, with the artists deconstructing common ideas of design, architectural history, genius, importance, gender, heroism, fiction vs. nonfiction and pretty much everything else that makes for a great class discussion in a college humanities course.

CONVENTIONS

'You For Me For You' not for everybody

After a string of critically acclaimed productions, Company One's latest, "You For Me For You," might leave you wondering what they were thinking. The play and the production could have used a lot more time in the workshop.

Playwright Mia Chung creates two worlds based on sweeping generalizations and asks the audience to accept their coexistence in different time dimensions. Three years transpire in New York City, while one day simultaneously passes in North Korea. It might work if the plot were less predictable and the stereotypes and cliches less blatant, but instead it makes the narrative difficult to follow.

It wouldn't hurt to make the abundance of thinly veiled double meanings a little less obvious. Even the set, an unappealing eyesore of brown that forces most of the action to take place on its perimeter, seems to be indicating tree bark, while maintaining an illusion that's about as exciting as a high school woodshop project.

Character development is rife with predictability. Minjee (Giselle Ty) and Junhee (Jordan Clark) are initially dull, flat cartoon-like characters living in squalor, dying as a result of the regime. As the story progresses, they each become more alive, though their true motivations are always obvious. Ty gets some funny lines, but Clark is left largely with pedestrian banter.

Anna Waldron plays a multitude of blonde dingbats named Tiffany with great authenticity, but it's sometimes chaotic and it quickly becomes mundane. Johnnie McQuarley's character fits the bill as Junhee's Prince Charming, but of course it's not going to happen.

Chung and director Bevin O'Gara should simply tell the story and let the audience see (or not see) the underlying message. NICK DUSSAULT

Whatever your faith, be humble

Three years ago it was predicted that the next pope would be an African in order to bulk up the Roman Catholic denomination which has been decimated by the corruption within its priestly ranks around the globe and its dishonest denial and coverup.

It is well recognized that the birthplace of religion/spirituality (Africa) produces very fervent committed souls to whatever religion/spiritual development system in which they are or to which they become involved, e.g., Christianity, Islam, Judaism, Jehovah's Witnesses, Mormonism, Buddhism, Ifa/Orisa Santeria, Candomble, Voodoo, Wicca, ad infinitum. This is due to the fact that they recognize that the energy force most commonly called "God" is within them all. There is no one that is right for everyone and there is no one that is wrong if that is the one to which one's soul leans for guidance and development. We generally have forgotten that "God" created this world and everyone and everything in it. Much less ego and much more submission to the Creator's plan would vastly improve mankind's earthly existence. ASABI RICH, VIA E-MAIL

Sure, let's side with the killer

RE: "FUGITIVE EX-COP BELIEVED DEAD AFTER GUN BATTLE, FIRE" (METRO, FEB. 14) I couldn't believe my ears and eyes as I watched CNN's coverage of former LAPD officer Christopher Dorner's demise. There were people who actually sympathized with this vicious cop-killer and blasted the LAPD for using incendiary tear gas to put and end to this horrific episode. The bleeding hearts are going to ruin our way of dealing with cold-blooded killers as they side with them and criticize law enforcement methods. In this case, I think the LAPD acted properly in doing whatever it took to stop Dorner from inflicting further mayhem on police officers and their families as he vowed to do. HERB STARK, VIA E-MAIL

Society's priorities all wrong — and then some

RE: "THE HAND ONLY ACTS AS THE HEART INSTRUCTS" (METRO, FEB. 14) Letter writer Rebecca Bellisario raises an important point. In a country where we glorify "sports" where the main object seems to be long-term injury, where we can't decide to care for our elderly neighbors enough to pay them (back) the money we promised them through their working lives, where we pay people to murder animals for food that we don't need, where our "leaders" say we should forgive violence but condemn personal sexual choice and where one of our largest industries is going to foreign countries and helping people kill each other, we surely have responsibility problems.

Then, someone gets shot, and we blame video games — but not an overriding culture that condones actual destruction in the name of self promotion. So, let's change our culture, but while we do I would like to know that we are at least doing something to check that we aren't putting tools whose sole purpose is mass murder into the hands of those who have already proven that they will gladly kill. And for those who think that owning a gun can stop bullets, I hear there is some good inner city housing available at a great deal. CHARLES BOSSE, VIA E-MAIL

Some concern about Seguin?

BRIAN BABINEAU/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Tyler Seguin hasn't lit the world on fire in 2013.

Red-hot Bruins in a position to pick nits ◗ When will Seguin begin to heat up? ◗ Just two goals in 2013

The Boston Bruins getting off to their best start in franchise history through 11 games (8-1-2) has certainly masked a couple serious issues: Everyone rightfully bashes their awful power play (4-for-43, 9.1 percent; 28th in NHL), but very few people have seemed to notice that Tyler Seguin — their best offensive player and top scorer last season (29 goals, 38 assists) — is off to a pretty slow start (2 goals, 4 assists) by his rising standards.

The tough part is figuring out why the third-year winger has struggled so much. The other five forwards on Boston's top two lines all have more points than him, led by David Krejci (4 goals, 7 assists). Seguin's paltry goal total comes with an asterisk, too, since one was an empty-netter at Carolina on Jan. 28. Other than that, his lone strike was a power-play goal on Feb. 6 at Montreal. It seems like one of the directions Claude Julien may go in to get Seguin going offensively and perhaps solve some of the power-play woes is to give him more ice time there over less-talented offensive players like Chris Bourque or Gregory Campbell, to name a few.

67 Tyler Seguin had 67 points in 81 games in the 2011-12 season. Through 11 games this year, the B's center has just six points.

Of course, it isn't all doom and gloom, as he leads the team in plus/minus with a plus-8. But the most troubling part about Seguin's start is that he's collected his points in only four games, which means that he's already had seven games of zero goals and zero assists. Conditioning shouldn't be an issue (hello, he's 21) since he was tearing it up in Switzerland (reportedly off the ice as well) during the NHL lockout.

There is the theory that playing in bigger rinks has been a factor and caused periods of adjustment. But if you're playing well, it typically doesn't matter what country or league you are participating in.

The good news for Seguin is that the B's are so deep that he can go through a rough patch like this and not really get hounded over it. That wouldn't be the case if he was on a bad team (say Buffalo) where he would be the main guy and scapegoat when things weren't going well. He's second on Boston in shots on goal with 34 but 10th on the team in shooting percentage (5.9).

In the news

Red Sox for life?

Kevin Youkilis is trying to have it both ways. Yes, he is now wearing a Yankees uniform, but he said Thursday at Yankees camp in Tampa that he'll "always be a Red Sock."

"To negate all the years I played for the Boston Red Sox, and all the tradition, you look at all the stuff I have piled up at my house, and to say I'd just throw it out the window, it's not true. Those were great years in Boston. One bad half-year doesn't take away from all the great years."

AFTER ALL THE HYPE'S GONE

Sleepers come in all shapes and sizes. Rookies and players moving to a friendlier ballpark are where most people look. They often ignore the post-hype sleepers.

Most prospects don't step into the league and start mashing like Mike Trout or Buster Posey. The majority are like Alex Gordon, who didn't "get it" until his fifth season. Here are some sleeper candidates to turn the corner in 2013:

Snake dump

It was surprising that the Diamondbacks gave up on Trevor Bauer after just four big-league starts, dumping him on the Indians. Fantasy owners shouldn't be as rash as his former catcher Miguel Montero, who bashed Bauer on his way out the door. Bauer is a near lock to win a rotation spot and still has tons of upside at age 21. His minor league numbers (12-2, 2.42 ERA, 157 strikeouts in 130 1/3 innings in 2012) are outrageous.

Lots of Hosmer

Eric Hosmer's perceived value is going to be deflated after last year's painful flop. We can blame the setback on a combination of growing pains, rotator cuff issues and bad luck on balls he put in play. Now we're set up to steal him this year as a true breakout candidate — part two.

You said it

Yankee fans expected Jesus Montero to be, well, Jesus. He never really got a chance to make it happen before he was traded to Seattle for Michael Pineda last offseason. Now the Mariners have moved the fence in and Montero has a year under his belt while facing lowered expectations. Remember he was an elite prospect two years ago.

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Eric Hosmer was considered one of baseball's best young players before last year's flop.

Top hoops adds

1. Jonas Valanciunas, C, TOR — Now healthy, this Lithuanian rookie is locked in as starter. Plenty of blocks and boards.
2. Taj Gibson, PF, CHI — He's worth owning through next week's deadline if Carlos Boozer is traded.
